

Photos from the 2014 Clarke Prize Award Ceremony and Lecture

The 2014 recipient of the Athalie Richardson Irvine Clarke Prize was David L. Sedlak, Ph.D. Sedlak is Malozemoff Professor in Mineral Engineering, Co-director of Berkeley Water Center, and Director of the Institute for Environmental Engineering and Science at University of California, Berkeley.

NWRI established the Clarke Prize in 1993 to honor outstanding individuals who have implemented better water science research and technology. The Clarke medallion and $50,000 award are presented annually.

Jerald Schnoor of University of Iowa (left) and Mark Wiesner of Duke University (center) were among the 14 Clarke Laureates who attended the Twenty-first Annual Clarke Prize Award Ceremony and Lecture in honor of David Sedlak (right).

The 2014 honoree David Sedlak received recognition for his achievements from Chair Michael Boots of the White House's Council of Environmental Quality, Madeleine Jacobs of the American Chemical Society, senators and representatives from California, and leaders at universities and water research organizations.

The 2014 honoree, David Sedlak, with his family at the Twenty-first Annual Clarke Prize Award Ceremony and Lecture in Huntington Beach, California. From left: Adam, Meg, David, and Jane.

Guests at the Twenty-first Annual Clarke Prize Award Ceremony and Lecture. Pictured here are: (Standing, from left) Shane Trussell, Perry McCarty, Mark Wiesner, Rhodes Trussell, Bruce Rittmann, and Bruce Logan. (Seated, from left) Liz Trussell, Mrs. Denny Parker, and Dr. Denny Parker.

Richard Luthy of Stanford University introduced his friend and colleague, David Sedlak, as the 2014 honoree of the Clarke Prize.

Morton Irvine Smith presented David Sedlak with the Clarke Prize medallion and $50,000 cash prize on behalf of the Joan Irvine Smith and Athalie R. Clarke Foundation, which helped establish the Clarke Prize. Smith is the grandson of Athalie R. Clarke.

As part of the award ceremony, David Sedlak presented the 2014 Clarke Lecture on "Delivering the Fourth Water Revolution." His Lecture focused on the history and evolution of water supply and treatment systems over the past 2,000 years.

The Clarke Prize Laureates: (Back row, from left) Perry McCarty, Philip Singer, George Tchobanoglous, Menachem Elimelech, Mark Wiesner, and Jerry Schnoor. (Front row, from left) Joan Rose, Bruce Rittmann, Rhodes Trussell, David Sedlak, Rafael Bras, Vernon Snoeyink, and Pedro Alvarez.

2014 Clarke Prize recipient David Sedlak poses with his colleagues from University of California, Berkeley, who attended the Twenty-first Annual Clarke Prize Award Ceremony and Lecture.